Keynote Speaker

About Ian Percy

An organizational psychologist, Ian has a world-wide reputation for his ability to blend depth of insight with uplifting inspiration. He's been changing the thinking of major corporations in technology, finance, pharmaceuticals, education, manufacturing and many other sectors – enabling them to move toward profitable transformation. He's the author of seven books including The Profitable Power of Purpose and As You think, So It Will Be, the latter scheduled for release in early 2008. Successful Meetings magazine declared him “One of the top 21 speakers for the 21st century” and he's been inducted into both the Canadian and U.S. Speaker Halls of Fame. Ian is a Canadian, though he and his wife, Georgia, now live in Scottsdale, Arizona.

About Trish McCarty

Trish was a high-ranking finance executive who felt a calling to help high-risk kids. She left the corporate world to build StarShine with her own money. Consequently, Trish's view of education is remarkable and ground-breaking. For example, she believes that we cannot teach students about prosperity and enterprise through an impoverished orientation where we constantly cut programs and limit essential materials. “When you approach education from almost a social service perspective,” she says, “there is lack. When you approach it from a business model, there is abundance and even profitability.” This story may well change your total outlook on where education is heading.

StarShine academy is a truly distinct K-12 charter school in Phoenix, Arizona. The impact it has is breathtaking, drawing the attention of the United Nations and school systems everywhere.

2007 Seminar

The Fall Seminar is intended to be a professional development activity for members. This Session will provide the opportunity to hear an expert presenter and to interact with others about educational programs. The planning committee has attempted to build in time for sharing and discussion.

The Fall Seminar is an opportunity for members to make contacts with new members and to renew acquaintances with others. The Executive of L.E.A.D.S. & S.A.S.B.O. and the Planning Committee look forward to your attendance.
